G.O.P.'S HAVE TASK PLEASING FACTIONS

SATISFYING ONE WITH PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION.

CHOOSING CANDIDATES

Johnson and Wood About Equal Because Politicians Want Neither —Lowden Is Gaining.

Washington, May 19.—National Republican strategy is being directed to two main ends: Nomination of a presidential candidate satisfactory to the conservative interests, and adoption of a League of Nations plank to which all elements of the party, the Johnson extremists as well as the mild middle-grounders, can subscribe.

As to the candidate, one man's guess is still as good as another's. Wood and Johnson, apparently, will go into the convention with about equal strength. The standpat element which rules the inner councils of the party wants neither of them; for neither could surely be counted upon to play the political game in the old way. The politicians want a return to the Hanna-McKinley days, not the days of Roosevelt.

It is further held against Wood that he is "tainted with militarism." This may or may not be true. The material fact is that the politicians believe that the public believes that it is true. Because of their conviction that the public, especially that of the Middle West, is opposed even to the faintest shadow of militarism, the leaders in the Senate dodged a vote on the universal military training issue. Gen. Wood is making his campaign as Leonard Wood, and his managers have sought in every way to remove the impression that he is "militaristic" in any objectionable sense, but they have not wholly succeeded. At least, the party bosses think they have not, which comes to the same thing.

Johnson Opposed As Radical.

The objections to Senator Johnson are obvious. It is enough that he is a radical, that he has attracted all sorts of radical groups to his support. The would-be President makers in this year of 1920 most emphatically don't want a radical; though it is said that Senator Penrose, as between Johnson and Wood, would prefer Johnson, because he believes the Californian would be more likely to "play ball" with the politicians than would the General. Penrose, it must always be understood, is primarily the boss of Pennsylvania, not a broad-visioned national leader. His main concern is to perpetuate his power in the Keystone State; he's for the candidate who promises best in that respect.

But the preference which current political report attributes to Penrose is for Johnson only as above Wood. "Bib Boies" want neither. As a feeler, he announced his liking for his colleague, Knox; he trotted him out, as the politicians say, to have him looked over. The response in the Republican press appears not to have been overenthusiastic. Knox wears too patently the brand of reactionary.

Lowden Has Good Chance.

There remains Harding, Hoover, Lowden. Harding's star is in eclipse; permanently according to best informed Republican opinion. His candidacy didn't "take" with the people. Hoover was a Republican possibility only so long as he remained also a Democratic possibility. So far as the leaders are concerned, he has been counted out. Lowden's strength in the inner circles is undoubtedly growing. Assuming that Wood and Johnson will kill each other off—an assumption quite prevalent among the political wiseacres — Lowden today stands as good a chance as any of the condidates now in the field. He has not stirred up the antagonisms that both Wood and Johnson will bring to the convention; he is conservative, but not too much so; he is, in short, the sort of colorless cardidate that the mandarins of the party prefer.

A good many competent observers believe that the nominee will be either Lowden or a dark horse. Governor Allen of Kansas is named as a possibility, though his stock has fallen of late. Charles E. Hughes is another.

Nothing, however, is settled with finality, except the major fact already mentioned, that the great General Staff of the party is moving heaven

FARRIS TELLS OF INDICTMENTS

REFERS IN JOPLIN ADDRESS TO HIS RECORD.

WAS NEVER CONVICTED

Candidate for Democratic Nomination for Governor Speaks Frankly About His Record.

Jopin, May 19.—Frank H. Farris of Rolla, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, who has been indicted and acquitted twice on legislative graft charges Monday night called attention to the fact in an address here formally opening his campaign. He also told of a third indictment, in Dent County, under the corrupt practices act, which has not been generally known.

Telling of his indictments in anticipation that the facts would be used against him in the campaign and to forestall his critics, Farris did not go into details or offer an extended defense. "I am the worst man in the world," he said, "except where I live. There are men with long tongues, loose at both ends, who are ready to say something slanderous about me, except where I live."

Not Disappointed.

"I knew when I started into this campaign that I would have to contend with this. I cave not been disappointed.

"In some places they think I have horns, that I am a wild man. I once carried a county in an election because the people there were given to understand that I was so terribly vile that when I went there and they saw that I was only human, they were for me.

"I know what's coming. I know more than that. I know the people of Missouri better than some men think. I know they are fair and square. When given to understand that a man is misrepresented and maligned and accused for no other purpose than political they will resent it.

"I have heard mutterings and so on; you will see in public prints that Frank Farris was indicted. Yes, he was! That's all they say. They won't say that he was tried and acquitted.

"Didn't Go to Mexico."

"I confess I was indicted, but I didn't go to Mexico. I stayed in Missouri. I was tried in the county in which I was indicted and it was not the county in which I lived. I was acquitted by a jury.

"I know another man. He wasn't tried. He was taken before a judge who said: 'I find no fault with you,' and the mob took this man out and hung him. Those who threw stones at me would hang me now after I have been discharged by the law.

"Yes, I know a good many who were indicted. There may have been a lot of others who ought to have been.

"They indicted me once in Dent County under the corrupt practices act in an election and I had not been in the county within six months of the election.

"I know what's coming. I knew it before I started. I say to these maligners that I live here in Missouri and always have, and I live within a hundred miles of where I was born. Go there and inquire how I stand. Ask any minister there, Protestant or Catholic. They will give me as clean a bill of health as most any of these preachers can get from their congregations.

Teaches Sunday School Class.

"Some folks will be startled when I tell you that I am an officer in the Presbyterian Church and teach a class in the Sunday school. Some people think I am an outlaw with a brace of pistols at my belt, going out to rob."

Farris' decision to refer in his speech to his indictments was reached after a conference here Monday, with a number of friends, who advised him that sooner or later in the campaign he would be compelled to meet publicly the fact that he had been indicted. He agreed with them that he might as well meet the accusations before they were made publicly.

PRICE SLASHING IN CLOTHING REPORTED

But Chicago Merchants Say There will be no Drop in Prices of Clothing for Time Being.

Chicago, May 19.—Price slashing on many articles of clothing is reported from numerous cities throughout the country today. Reductions of twenty-five per cent were reported on suits, shoes and a number of silk articles. Chief reason for price cutting is said by the merchants to be "tight money" and poor transportation. Chicago proved to be an exception in the price slashing war and leading merchants here announced there will be no drop in prices of clothing for the time being.

Philadelphia, May 19. — Prices of clothing, shoes and general merchandise are being reduced by all of the leading merchants of Philadelphia, the cuts ranging from twenty to thirty-five per cent.

Pittsburg, May 19.—A few leading stores announced twenty per cent reduction in clothing but there has been no general slashing of prices in Pittsburg. Some cuts of meats and food stuffs are steadily advancing.

Boston, May 19.—Wide-spread campaign on price slashing is under way today in the New England cities. Clothing and shoes are the principal commodities affected. Many New England mills report cancellation of orders leading to the belief that the production has at last passed the demands.

Mobile, Ala., May 19. — "Bargain Sales" and "why wear overalls?" indicate a general slump in prices of clothing in Mobile which is said to average twenty-five per cent reduction especially in men's wear.

San Francisco, May 19.—Epidemic of price cutting is in vogue here today by several leading stores. It is announced there has been a flat reduction of twenty per cent on the entire stocks.

ENGLISH NEWSPAPER LAUNCHED ANOTHER BITTER ATTACK.

London, May 19.—Horato Bottomly, member of parliament, has launched another attack against the United States in the current number of his newspaper "John Bull," under the caption, "trouble is brewing with America our next enemy." He defends Admiral Sims by saying the Americans are not all Wilsons and Daniels and there are a few stalwart fellows like Sims who have been standing up for the old navy of the old country with courage and candor worthy of the best English stock.

Bottomley recapitulates alleged American insults to Great Britain including the President's speech to officers of the Atlantic fleet when the United States entered the war in which the British navy was criticized, the floating of bonds by De Valera, head of the Irish Sinn Fien, tolerance of the Sinn Fien propaganda in the United States, and snubbing of Viscount Grey and Sir Lackland Gebbes, present British ambassador to Washington, and the alleged breach of Anglo-American relations attributed by Bottomly to "Insane Ideals."

MOTION TO INVITE CARRANZA TO RESIGN PRESIDENCY DEFEATED.

Washington, May 19.—Motion to invite Carranza to resign the presidency made during a caucus of the Mexican senators was defeated according to reports printed in the Mexico City newspapers May 18 and telegraphed to the State Department by the American embassy today. Six justices of the supreme court who accompanied Carranza in his flight have returned to the capitol, press reports stated.

Mrs. Maud McIntosh of Omaha, Neb., arrived in Maryville yesterday morning to be at the bedside of her father, William Lowry, who has had a relapse of bronchial pneumonia.

SAYS COUNTRY NEEDS MORE TREES

LACK OF FORESTS FACTOR IN HIGH COSTS.

HITS MANY INDUSTRIES

Two Hundred Thousand Acres of Timber Recently Bought Up by Match Concern.

Washington, May 19.— Now comes another reason for the high cost of living. This time it is trees. There are not enough trees to go round.

"Production and more production is the one thing that everybody seems to agree upon as the antidote for the high cost of living but who will produce the forests that provide the wood and the paper that keeps 10 per cent of an industry going, asks Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Forestry Association. "We are using up our forests almost three times faster than we are replenishing them. We cannot step out into the open market and order a billion feet of lumber grown for delivery day after tomorrow or week after next. We may be able to figure on how much wheat or how much corn we can ship on a given date, or make plans for the production of a thousand automobiles, for in these cases the matter of production is but a matter of days or weeks. Not so with trees, for with trees it is a matter of years.

"Just the other day some two hundred thousand acres of timber land was bought up by a match concern. The tons consumption of pulp wood from which print paper is made has increased enormously. The war made a great drain on our timber resources. Newspaper publishers wrestled with the newsprint situation at their last meeting will continue to wrestle with it for some time, it is safe to predict. When we stop to think that our forests are the basis of all national prosperity and that nothing is being done looking to a national forest policy, we must as business men stop indeed. Here is the situation:

"Use of newsprint has increased 200 per cent in twenty years. Ten years ago the United States produced its entire supply of pulp wood, but now two-thirds of it is imported. This means freight rates to be added to the purchase price. Of all the paper used in the United States 22 per cent is used by newspapers. Only one newprint plant has been constructed in the United States since 1909.

"But newspaper publishers are not the only ones hit," continued Mr. Pack. "In other industries the need of wood is as great. Over 52,000 manufacturers depend on the forests for raw materials and work is given 1,130,000 men in wood-using plants. The value of the product of these establishments amounts to 10 per cent of the total value of all manufactures. The capital invested to be $3,000,000,000, or 13 per cent of the aggregate manufacturing investment.

"Production is the world, as we all agree, but production must be begun at one of the prime sources of our nation's wealth, the nation's forests."

G. O. P.'S HAVE TASK

and earth to get the "right" candidate and yet prevent a bolt. A significant process of trading appears to be in progress. Developments that have come to the surface indicate that Johnson is trading his radical principles for recognition of his bitter-end treaty fight, and that the treaty reservationists are training their mild League of Nations views for Johnson's support. The end in view, of course, is to harmonize all elements of the party under the banner of a conservative candidate who is yet not so obviously conservative as to invite the veto of Johnson.

Talk of a bolt crops up periodically, but most observers discount it. Borah they say, speaks for himself, not for Johnson. With victory, as they believe in their grasp, it is hardly conceivable that the Republicans will countenance any course that would threaten a repetition of the catastrophe of 1912. That lesson is too fresh in mind. Will Hays is eternally on the job for "harmony." Return of the party to power—that's the main desideratum. The party is out to win—win with a conservative of possible, but win.

But how can any league of nations plank be drawn to satisfy all the conflicting Republican elements? To the lay mind it would seem an impossible task. Here are three divergent groups each as far apart from the others as one political party nominally is from the other; the Johnson bitter-enders, the Lodge reservationists and the mild reservationists.

Two Planks for Republicans.

To the word jugglers who make the party platforms anything is possible. Two planks of the Republican declaration at Chicago have virtually been agreed upon. One is a ringing condemnation of the Wilson administration, lock, stock and barrel. That came easy. The other represents the highest art of the platform maker. It solved the problem raised by Republican dissention on the treaty. It ringingly indorses all the 49 Republican Senators for their "Americanism" in dealing with the treaty. That is the umbrella (mixing the metaphor is perhaps pardonable in this connection) under which all can get in out of the rain—the Johnson faction, the Lodge faction and the mild McNary-McCumber group. Senator Newberry is not mentioned by name but, as he is one of the 49, he shares in the endorsement.

Johnson gets an O K on his anti-treaty fight; so also do the reservationists on their fight for a modified treaty. The "Americanism" plank will let the presidential candidate, whoever he may be, take whatever stand on the treaty the party may think warranted by future developments. Politically speaking, it is a perfect plank.

POLITICAL NEWS FROM CONVENTIONS HELD YESTERDAY

Georgia Democrats Repudiate League of Nations—Nebraska Made No Mention of Bryan.

Atlanta, Ga., May 19.—Resolutions expressing "unalterable opposition" to the League of Nations' covenant as brought back from Paris by President Wilson, advocating free speech, free press and local self government and asking repeal of all espionage, sedition and conscription laws passed in the war, were adopted here late last night by the state Democratic convention.

Repeated attempts of the Palmer faction to have read the report of the state Democratic executive committee were ruled out of order after having been voted down twice. This committee had held that under the rules of the primary, Attorney General Palmer having won a pulrality of county unit votes in the primary, was entitled to the Georgia delegation at the national convention.

The resolutions as adopted recorded opposition to the third term idea, reaffirmed the faith of the convention in the "ancient creed" of the Democratic party and instructed its delegates to San Francisco to vote as a unit to support no candidate not in accord with the principles adopted by the convention.

After the Smith and Watson forces had elected delegates to the national convention, the Palmer supporters bolted, and as a result, two delegations will go to San Francisco, where the issue will be decided.

Omaha, Nebr., May 19.—For the first time in thirty years a Democratic state convention has been held in Nebraska without the name of William Jennings Bryan having been mentioned. The convention met in Omaha yesterday and although Charles W. Bryan, the Commoner's brother, was a delegate to the convention and a member of the resolutions committee, the name of William J. Bryan was not mentioned, neither in speech nor in resoution.

The convention was organized by friends of Senator G. M. Hitchcock.

A special resolution was adopted unanimously in which the candidacy of Senator Hitchcock for the Democratic nomination for the presidency was commended and the senator lauded for his work for the League of Nations.

Montpelier, Vt., May 19.—Returns from approximately one-third of the state in yesterday's presidential preference primary early today showed that Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood had polled about 70 per cent of an extremely light Republican vote. Senator Johnson and Herbert Hoover were running a close race for second place. Only two names were printed on the ballots, those of General Wood and William Grant Webster of New York, both Republicans. Webster trailed a number of Republicans whose names were written in.

WILL IMPOSE MINIMUM AMOUNT INDEMNITY AGAINST GERMANY.

Berlin, May 19.—News from London and Paris that Premiers Lloyd George and Millerand have decided to impose the minimum lump sum of hundred and twenty billion gold marks upon Germany has not visibly impressed the members of the government, their viewpoint being that the final amount of indemnity will be settled by Germany's ability to pay rather than by the allies' wishes.

KANSAS MINERS BACK TO WORK TODAY, IT IS ANNOUNCED

Kansas City, May 19.—There will be no tie up in the Southwest as the coal mines representatives of the miners and operators in conference here reached an agreement of increased charges for coal explosives to workers of more than 12,000 Kansas miners. They are to return to work today, officials announced. New wage contracts are expected to be drawn up and signed today.

Legislation to authorize good roads bonds issues amounting to $391,253,800 are pending with excellent chances of being passed.

"MEMORY" TREES GOOD IDEA

Many Are Being Planted to Commemorate the War Services of Americans in the Great War.

A good many trees have been planted here and there over the country by way of memorializing American soldiers who gave up their lives in the war. Mostly they are for individuals—a single tree set in a place somehow associated in his lifetime with the one who is gone. A number of groves or parks and stretches of roadway are planned, however, where trees are to be planted in groups or in rows in honor of the fallen ones of certain communities. They call them "memory trees," which is a good name.

Of the single trees an illustration is one planted by pupils of the Force school in Washington, which was attended by Quentin Roosevelt when he was a young boy. He was the only former pupil to lose his life in the world war. A committee of 12, formed by appointment of a member from each class, will have the care of the tree; as each member graduates from his class he appoints a member from the incoming class to take his place. Thus there will always be a committee at the school to look after this tree.

WHEN MULE WAS A NOVELTY

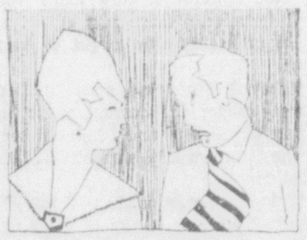
The first mule seen in this country was sent to George Washington by the king of Spain. The mule measured 15 hands high, and his ears were 14 inches long. His disposition was so ungrateful that General Washington remarked on the beast's inability to appreciate "republican enjoyment."

The mule was given much publicity. Washington sent him out on a tour of the South, where his long ears, peculiar voice and strange appearance drew large crowds and created much excitement. The attention lavished upon the mule forced the keeper to hurry him from place to place at such a pace that the animal reduced considerably. Washington having been shocked with his condition upon his reappearance in Mount Vernon.

It is said that Washington looked forward to producing a breed of mules suitable to draw the family carriage, but history does not record whether the first president carried out this plan. He was, however, at all times very enthusiastic over mules, and commented upon them in glowing terms as an excellent race of animals.

Woman Good Trapper.

Trapping predatory animals is scarcely the kind of occupation in which a woman might be expected to distinguish herself, even with the great extension of the range of feminine activity to which we have been accustomed lately. Mrs. Ada Tingley of Idaho is reported, however, by the Northwestern division of the United States biological survey to be so successful in this employment that her male rivals are finding it hard to keep up with her records. Her victims are mainly coyotes, bobcats, wolves, lynxes and mountain lions. At 8:30 every morning Mrs. Tingley mounts her cayuse and rides off to her traps, of which she runs six lines, of 50 each. She uses a fish bait prepared by a secret formula.



A GREAT CHANGE.

Burglar-Proof Glass.

There is a glass of French invention which is intended to be proof against burglars. So many cases of burglary have been committed by the breaking of show-windows and snatching of valuables on exhibition that a special effort has been made to end this particular form of theft.

The French glass, it appears, is produced by a secret process, but the makers admit that thickness and care in its manufacture are its principal essentials. It is made about three-quarters of an inch thick and on test has resisted the blow of a ten-pound iron disk. The same blow would have shattered ordinary plate glass completely.

Eats Any Old Thing.

A wood-boring beetle in California, undismayed by lead or even by alloys that are harder than lead, has put hundreds of telephones out of use. The beetle bores into the cables that carry the wires, then wafer gets in and makes the wire useless until the damage is repaired. As yet no one has found a way to keep the beetles out. Perhaps some entomological Burbank will train wireworms to plug holes or tapeworms to wrap them.—Youth's Companion.

A CAMPAIGN OF MISREPRESENTATION

SENATOR HITCHCOCK DECLARED INDULGED IN BY OPPONENTS.

THE FIVE RESERVATIONS

Offered by the Senator Were Approved by the President, Disapproving Claims of Accepting Change.

Washington, D. C.—Repeated statements made by Republican members of the Senate that the President has refused to accept any change in the League of Nations covenant are disproved by the record itself, asserts Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, who led the Democrats in the treaty fight. Senator Hitchcock says that he himself offered five compromise reservations to the peace treaty, and that they were approved by the President.

Partisan claims that the President has demanded the adoption of the treaty without the dotting of an "I" or the crossing of a "T", Senator Hitchcock declares, constitute an example of the campaign of misrepresentation indulged in by treaty opponents.

"The President's recent letter," said Senator Hitchcock, "declared his devotion to the League of Nations and denounced the Lodge reservations. That is all it did. I denounce them. I will never consent to them and many other Senators never would, and millions of people never would.

"But those Lodge reservations were matched by reservations on this Democratic side of the chamber. I had the honor to offer five reservations, and they were endorsed by the President and they were a tender of compromise. On article Ten I offered a reservation which was a compromise. There was some doubt as to whether the President would accept that, but we on this side of the aisle were willing to stand for it. You did not accept it. Yet that reservation was drawn by a former Republican President of the United States (William H. Taft) but you refused to accept it. We offered all the compromise; the Republican side offered none. You refused all."

Quoting the claim of Senator Knox that the President had kept the country in an alleged state of war for almost a year now because he would not yield one jot or tittle on the treaty Senator Hitchcock said:

"How can a man say a thing of that sort to the Senate of the United States with a straight face? The President came back here with the treaty and delivered it to the Senate in July, 1919, and the Senate sent it to the Foreign Relations Committee, of which the Pennsylvania Senator, Mr. Knox, is a member. That committee locked up the treaty within the four walls of the committee room for two months, although they might as well have reported it out in one week. But they kept it there, delaying peace.

"The Senator from Pennsylvania, author of the Knox peace resolution, was one of the Senators whose votes made that outrageous delay possible, and when it came into the Senate in September it was debated until the 15th of November. It had been debated even before September, and it was talked about for all these months, and when finally patience ceased to be a virtue I offered a resolution of cloture to stop debate and the Senator from Pennsylvania voted against it. He did not want to stop debate. He was not then afraid of delay."

For the second time, Senator Hitchcock pointed out, the Senate debated the treaty for weeks, finally rejecting it a short time ago. Senator Knox, he said, voted against ratifying in any form.

"Yet he now talks about the President of the United States keeping the country in a state of war," exclaimed Senator Hitchcock, "when he was instrumental himself in continuing that perfectly outrageous delay, and if he had had his way he would have been debating the question even to this day."

PRESIDENT WILL VETO KNOX RESOLUTION.

Washington, D. C.—That the President under his oath of office to observe and support the constitution of the United States will veto the Knox peace resolution when it reaches the White House, was forecast in the Senate when Senator Hitchcock, ranking Democrat of the Foreign Relations committee, asserted that subterfuge propositions offered by the Republican majority in lieu of the peace treaty were "all doomed to defeat."

It is possible that the two houses will agree on a composite "peace resolution", fashioned along the lines of the measures offered by Senator Knox and Representative Porter, and it will be approved by partisan majorities in both houses after agreement in conference committee. It will be impossible, however, for the resolution to be passed over the veto of the President.

In vetoing the peace resolution, the President probably could find no better reason than that advanced more than a year ago by the Republican floor leader of the Senate, Senator Lodge. In a signed article in The Forum, Senator Lodge wrote that it would be dishonorable for the United States to attempt to make a separate peace with Germany. It would not be playing fair, he said, with the allies of this government and would amount to national dishonor.

At this time, however, a separate peace resolution was not contemplated and Senator Lodge was candidly discussing peace making by orderly processes.

Senator Hitchcock reminded the Senate that the Republican majority had made five attempts to frame a peace resolution to take the place of a constitutional peace treaty. The first, he said, was a declaration of peace, but Senator Knox discovered that Congress did not have the power to declare peace, that proposal having been debated and rejected in the constitutional convention. Finally, he said, the resolution as now presented proposed to declare the war at an end. Senator Hitchcock asked what difference there was between the two propositions.

"Congress has no power to declare peace," said Senator Hitchcock, "so now we have raised the interesting distinction between declaring peace and declaring war at an end. What is the difference?"

Senator Hitchcock recalled that in December, 1918, Senator Lodge and other Republican Senators were condemning all suggestions that the United States make a separate peace with Germany. He quoted Senator Lodge's views in The Forum article, which said in part:

"We can not, in the first place, make peace except in company with our allies. It would brand us with everlasting dishonor and bring ruin to us if we undertook to make a separate peace."

"Do the supporters of this pending Knox resolution," asked Senator Hitchcock, "want to brand us with dishonor and bring ruin upon us? In one provision of this resolution it is stated that the United States does not waive any of its rights under the treaty it has rejected. Could anything be more ridiculous, than to assume and indicate that we have any rights to waive after we have refused to ratify the treaty which grants them?

"The treaty itself provides that the treaty will enter into force for each power at the date of the deposit of ratification. Yet the pending resolution gravely provides that we waive no rights under it as though we got some rights by refusing to ratify the treaty.

"Altogether the five desperate attempts to defy the Constitution and substitute a resolution for a treaty make a fine display of legislative experimentation."

SURE RELIEF FROM ITCHING SKIN DISEASES

Will Never Come From Salves, Ointments, or Other Local Treatment.

A million gallons of lotions, ointments, salves or other forms of local treatment will not give any real permanent relief from skin diseases. Get this fact firmly in your mind, and there is hope for you.

If you have ever been afflicted with eczema, tetter, boils, eruptions, or other similar skin irritations you can appreciate the real terrifying discomfort that comes from these disorders. And what you are looking for is not merely temporary, palliative relief that may cause the terrible burning and itching to abate for awhile, but real genuine relief that shakes off the shackles of the disease, and restores the skin to its former healthy condition.

Follow the teachings of science, and you will learn that the skin is fed by the blood, and naturally, then, the condition of your skin will depend upon the condition of your blood. If the blood becomes infested with millions of tiny disease germs that attack the skin, then the fiery irritation and intense itching will remain with you until these germs are attacked at their source and removed from the blood.

Genuine relief, therefore, can only be expected from a treatment that goes right to the seat of the trouble, and strikes at its cause. Such a remedy is S. S. S., the reliable old blood purifier that kills the germs of disease, and sends a new supply of rich red blood coursing through the veins.

S. S. S. has been used successfully in some of the worst cases of eczema and other skin disorders, and it can be relied upon to cleanse the blood thoroughly of the germs which cause these complaints. S. S. S. is also a splendid tonic and system-builder, and it builds up and adds new vigor to the whole system.

Go to your drug store and get a bottle of S. S. S. today, and begin the right treatment for skin diseases. Then if you feel that your case requires special medical advice, you can obtain same without cost, by writing to Chief Medical Adviser, 13 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

SUCCESS IN MARRIED LIFE

To Insure It, Says Court Official, Each Should Be a Partner, as in Business Enterprise.

A wide experience with husbands and wives has enabled Mrs. Julia L. McGuire of the Chicago court of domestic relations to formulate these principles which she gives in People's Magazine.

"It can all be summed up in about the same way textbooks on business tell one to sum up the proposition of going into business partnership:

"1. Know your partner. Study him—or her—under trying circumstances as well as when things are going well.

"2. Be sure that you and your partner agree in your purposes and ambitions. Compare notes with each other and find out whether you have the same tastes and hopes for the future. Find out your prospective partner's idea of what to do in prosperity or adversity.

"3. Settle upon your working program for the future. Decide how you will apportion your working funds; face frankly the possibilities for trouble, and arrange in advance to meet them. Determine in advance the direction in which you will expend your establishment when you have savings to disburse.

"4. Institute an adequate system of cost accounting to see to it that your funds go for the purposes you have agreed upon. Get into the habit of being frank with each other, of clearing up misunderstandings instead of letting them rankle.

"5. Go to it—and stick to it—along these lines.

"6. Unless one of you has hidden faults, you will not fail.

"That is what I have learned from my contact with forty-four thousand unhappy marriages, which I have been able to sum up, scrutinize and analyze. The soundest advice to both men and women that I could give is: 'Play fair and use common sense with husband or wife.'"

LONG A FAMOUS PLAYHOUSE

The oldest playhouse in America, which is to be replaced in part at least by a modern structure, is the Walnut street theater in Philadelphia, opened in 1809. It has never missed a season in these 111 years.

Edwin Forrest made his first regular appearance here at the age of fourteen, getting his first start through the influential backing of Col. John Swift, at one time mayor of Philadelphia. The play in which Forrest appeared was "Douglas," and in the cast were Wheatley, Mrs. Williams, Joe Jefferson's grandmother, and Warren and Wood, managers of the theater and of the stock company. Warren and Wood considered themselves very unfortunate in the cast of novices they had to deal with and were greatly surprised when Forrest acquitted himself so well that the public expressed a desire for the play's repetition.

The English tragedian, Edmund Kean, appeared at the Walnut in 1821. During the 16 nights of his engagement the receipts ran as high as $1,370, only once falling below $650. In these days this was considered a prodigious sum in theatrical circles.

Beaver Money.

John Jacob Astor introduced the beaver skin as a medium of exchange, and it was not until beaver hats were outlawed by the modern felt hat made from rabbit fur that beaver money went out of fashion.

For about 100 years the beaver skin had its fixed value by which the cost of any other article was determined. It is said that the process of making hats from rabbit pelts actually saved beaver from extinction in North America.

Most of the beaver was trapped by Indians, and ambitious white men exerted their wits in separating the red man from his treasures.

If an Indian thought he needed furs to keep warm, he was given a drink of something that made him feel that he wouldn't need an overcoat, after all.—Detroit News.

Make a Beginning.

Many people prosper on ideas that come from without. In a measure these are common property. The really great ventures that make outstanding men are those born within a man and therefore peculiarly his property. When appreciated and acted upon they give him the inside chance that others will covet when they see him beginning to climb. So instead of sitting around moping it's "up to you" to start something. Let your thinker sink deep down into your anatomy and mine the unused possibilities that are rusting out for want of use. And rest assured unexpected possibilities will open up just as soon as you start something.—Exchange.

Missouri Weather.

The frequent rains recently have made us appreciate what an old lady from Arkansas said about us once after a visit up here. When she made up her mind to go home she remarked: "Well, yer see, honey, it's this here-away: In Missouri when it starts to rain it never quits, and when it clouds up the sun never shines, and when it does get clear you never see a cloud again, and when it gets hot it never turns cool, and when it once gets cold it never warms up no more."

THE LIGHTHOUSE.

The slow sea croons as a tiger tamed,
Full fed, inclined to play;
But we know his mood when the black clouds brood,
As the lightnings leap to slay.
When wind and water combine for slaughter
And torture the tossing ships,
Then the sea's wild whine is a cry malign
From a loosened tiger's lips!

But however the winds of the world may roar,
However the wild sea whines,
Warning the danger that haunts the shore,
The lamp in the lighthouse shines!
Warning of danger and promise of aid,
And guide on a pathless way—
This is the pharos that men have made
For the ships on the sea astray.

So the waves may purr, or the winds may blow
From the south of the earth or north;
From Skerryvore to the Boston shore—
Tree Point to the Firth of Forth.
Though death rides high through the windy sky
On the strength of the tempest's wings,
Hour on hour the lamp in the tower
Burns on and the fog bell rings.

So it hath been since the ancient days
When the priests of ancient fame
Kindled in Egypt a high red blaze
For the fleets that homeward came,
Warning of danger, promise of aid,
And guide on a pathless way—
This is the pharos that men have made
For the ships on the sea astray!

Daylight grew dim. The afternoon shadows lengthened. Lamps that should have been lit remained unlit.

By seven o'clock they had kissed each other 40 times.

At last, when the echo of the dinner gong had long ceased to vibrate through the hall below, he shifted his position and drew away a little.

"Darling," she cried, tears of anguish springing in her eyes, "have you ceased to love me?"

"No, sweetheart," he replied thickly; "but, hang it all, one must breathe."

"Highland Mary's" Grave Preserved.

Highland Mary Campbell, Burns' first love, has been discussed in the British parliament. It was feared that her grave would be destroyed to make room for extensions of the Harlan & Wolff ship building yards at Greenock. On the final reading of the Greenock improvement order confirmation bill in the house of commons, Mr. Alexander Shaw, secretary for Scotland, replying to many queries on the subject, stated that the sentimental objections lodged by the Burns federation and other societies will be respected. The grave of Highland Mary is to be left untouched, he said, only the monument being turned around to face the road. "In due course," added Mr. Shaw, "a second suitable monument will be erected on the same site more accessible to the public."

Armenia.

Armenia (the Scriptural Minni) is a country of northeastern Asia Minor, bounded on the north by Trebizond and Transcaucasia, on the south by Kurdistan, and on the east by the Caspian sea. For the most part it is a tableland with an average elevation of over 5,000 feet, the culminating point being Mount Ararat, 16,900 feet high. Armenia contains the headwaters of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. The Armenians are Caucasians and speak a branch of the Aryan language. They have long been noted for their enterprising commercial spirit. They are Christians and have been most cruelly persecuted by the Turks. During the recent war thousands of Armenians were massacred. The treaty with Turkey has not, as this is written, been concluded.

RETAINING KNOWLEDGE.

Mother—Henry, does your ear ache?

Henry—No, mother.

Mother—Then why have you put cotton wool in it?

Henry—Well, you know, mother, you keep on telling me that I learn so little because what goes in one ear comes out of the other, so I've plugged the other one up!

Something Accomplished.

"Who is the learned looking man?"

"A synthetic chemist."

"What's he working on?"

"A beer tablet."

"Has he succeeded in producing one?"

"No, but he's discovered a new composition that's fine for making buttons and pipe stems."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Held Prisoner by Spirit.

When a Bangor (Me.) business man closed his office late in the afternoon a woman was standing in the doorway waiting for a car, and neither he nor she noticed that when he closed the door her skirt caught in the jamb. When her car came along she missed it. Half an hour afterward the business man, summoned by telephone, arrived and released the woman.

TELLS REASON FEW WOMEN MAKE FUN

NOTED ACTRESS' VIEWS

Says It Demands Greater Artistry for a Woman to be Funny Than For a Man.

London.—A well-known theatrical manager told us recently that London was experiencing a great shortage of women who could be really funny. In fact, he said, there are only four or five of them on the bills.

Who these few who are gifted with the divine spark of humor may be I do not pretend to guess, but the fact remains that they are few, and, in view of the preponderance of male mirthmakers, the question naturally arises whether women are really lacking in the ability to make a house laugh.

In spite of what may be said, however, I refuse to admit that they lose anything to men as far as humor is concerned. That women can be really and truly funny is absolutely proved by the fact that some of them have attained top rank as comediennes. If their ranks are thin, there is a reason for it. Women are not generally encouraged to be funny.

In the family circle the boy who can sing a comic song with gusto or turn a droll countenance is applauded as clever. But let the embryo comedienne attempt to demonstrate the same gifts and she is promptly suppressed. She is told that she is "unladylike" or even "vulgar" in her behavior. And so the girl, whose inborn spirit bids her provoke the world to laughter, is treated in after life. She is given the impression that to be funny for the purpose of amusing her fellows is "not quite good form."

Many a young comedienne is thus rendered diffident. She loses her triumph by being afraid to let herself go.

At the same time I do not intend to imply that a comedienne should necessarily strive after humor by copying her male compeers. A woman's humor runs essentially in a different vein from a man's.

A comedian can—and often does—make a name for himself by specializing in broad, riotous humor, whereas the girl who imitates him is treading on dangerous ground. The comedienne has to preserve a higher tone, and for that reason it demands greater artistry, in my estimation, for a woman to be funny than for a man.

A man, for instance, is almost sure to raise a laugh by appearing in some grotesque costume, featuring big boots and prehistoric hat, but a girl will not impress her audience so surely by favoring such tactics. They expect something daintier and more original from her. She has therefore a bigger job to "get a laugh."

Another reason why it is difficult for a girl to make a name as a comedienne is that somehow or other the public does not expect a woman to be funny. If she proves to be they will recognize it certainly, but their expectation is that the comedienne—unless, of course, she has a reputation as a comedy artist—will leave them mirthless.

In fact, circumstances combine to freeze the genial current of feminine humor. Women should not be blamed if they fail to shine with such lustre in the fun firmament as the more encouraged and less trammelled male.

"Yes sir, it is pretty hard to collect money just now." "Have you tried and failed?" "Oh no, but several people have tried to collect from me."—Boston Transcript.

THE AFTERMATH

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR.

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

"You have lost your position in the bank," spoke Norma Drury. "Oh, father! how can that be?"

Martin Drury's head was bent low, he was pale and agitated and acted like a man who had received a heavy blow.

"Not because of any dishonesty, Norma," he said, bravely attempting a smile. "Since I was given charge of the securities cage my salary has been raised and I seem to have pleased both Mr. Wardell, the president of the bank, and the directors with my services. Today I carried all the Liberty bond packets to the desk of Mr. Wardell for him to check up. He returned them an hour later. Then I was called to the cashier's desk on some business. When I returned to assort the packets one was missing—No. 23. Mr. Wardell's schedule showed he had checked it, with the others. It was for $3,000. It was gone, and the only fault found with me was that I had left the packets on my desk when hurriedly called by the cashier, instead of first placing them in the vault."

"Then—"

"Somebody on the watch, it is assumed, reached through the wicket and extracted the $3,000 packet."

"And Mr. Wardell?"

"Consulted the directors. He was kind enough and just enough to vouch for my integrity, but said that I was getting old, that I needed less responsible work and has offered to retain me at a reduced salary, but in an inferior position. It is hard lines!" and the voice broke. "My pride—my pride—"

Norma came up to her father and twined her arms about him. "Dear father," she said tenderly, "I shall give up my preparations to become a teacher. You have had me help you so much with bank work you have brought home evenings that I have practically learned the business, as you may say. At all events we are responsible for a loss of $3,000. Together we will make it good."

That was the amazing proposition Norma Drury made to stern, systematic Martin Drury the next day. If the old financier was secretly moved by the filial act and sacrifice of the loyal young girl, he did not betray the fact. In his cool, methodical way he accepted the proffer, and one quarter of the joint compensation of father and daughter was each month to be retained and credited on the loss account.

If Mr. Drury felt humiliated by his reduction in working rank it was more than made up for in having Norma for company in the bank. He grew a little more gray, a little more bent, but he was proud of his daughter and their mutual work for a noble object filled both with a high sense of duty sturdily faced.

David Wardell's health failed and he was ordered to a sanitarium for permanent treatment. A month later he died and his only son, Sydney, was summoned from college to take charge of the affairs of the bank. He was a bright, intelligent fellow and from the start Norma attracted him. When he learned all the details of her connection with the bank there appeared a high order of respect and admiration in his manner toward her. He never alluded to the loss of the bonds, but twice in the ensuing year he advanced Mr. Drury in position and salary. He came to Norma one day, later.

"Miss Drury," he said, "you have done such faithful, helpful work during the past year, that the bank has decided to send you away for a month's vacation, bearing all expenses and your salary to run on the same with a 25 per cent raise for next year."

"You are very kind, but do I deserve it?" spoke Norma.

"We think so," declared Sydney heartily, and Norma felt that he was genuinely sincere. It was a rest she craved and enjoyed. The happy four weeks ended in a surprise. The day before setting out for her return she received a note from her father that considerably mystified her. It informed her that young Wardell would be at Leeville the next morning on an automobile trip, and that he would call for her and drive her home. It was not strange that Norma fluttered and marveled when the young man arrived next day.

It was late afternoon when the car reached her home town. Young Wardell drove around to the bank and halted in front of it.

"There has been something of a change in the personnel of the institution since you went away, Miss Drury," he told her, and he pointed to a newly emblazoned window bearing the two names: "Sydney Wardell, President: Martin Drury, Cashier." Norma stared, bewildered.

"We were moving my father's old desk last week," said Sydney, "and behind one of the drawers we found that missing $3,000. Don't you think I was glad to award your dear father what he so deserves after all the years of his faithful service?"

Norma broke down utterly. Insensibly her tear-bedewed face pressed the shoulder of her companion. He thrilled at the contact. Just then a brilliant glint of sunshine illumed the drab western sky.

"Look," Sydney said, "a presage of gladness for all your future, I hope," and she knew from the glow in this clear, honest eyes that love actuated the sentiment.

A GENIAL HOST

By GEORGE E. COBB

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

The most agreeable incident that had come into the boy life of Ted Morse was that signalized by his stay for one week at the Palace hotel at Brompton, owned and operated by his father's brother, John Morse. Thenceforth the lad had one fervid ambition: to become in time the manager or proprietor of a like establishment.

Uncle John was a portly individual who had followed the hotel business for over a quarter of a century. He was built for the task both in disposition and bulk. He knew every commercial traveler on the road, he kept fairly apace of the times in equipment and improvements. The dazzled Ted took back home with him a pleasant memory of the big arm chair in the hotel lobby, filled by his big relative, who was revered by his clientele, always jolly and joking, a typical "mine host."

The years went on, but the glowing memory never faded from the mind of Ted. He became a clerk in the store of his native village and one day received a letter that set his wits staggering. His uncle had died and had bequeathed to him the hotel. The dream of early youth was fulfilled.

"Your uncle had been failing for about two years," the executor of the estate told Ted when he arrived at Brompton, "and the odds and ends have not maintained the old systematic order. However, young blood coming into the proposition will make the best of a very promising situation."

It was to Ted to make himself popular. He faithfully copied his uncle's methods. He became a genial host, indeed. He was accommodating, lenient, agreeable. The traveling men took to him and there was no stinting in the menu and no deterioration in general service. A new element came into the situation later that harassed Ted. His friends and relatives began to trade on his liberal, easy going nature. They came in swarms. They came with their families and sent their friends as well. It seemed as though every acquaintance he had received a tip that half rates, or no rates at all, were accessible to those who had the art to appeal successfully to the indulgence of a man who loved to be considered a genial host, and whose ambition was to be known as "running the best hotel on the road."

By the end of a year Ted began to realize his weakness. Thus, a half cousin had swooped down upon him with a family of five, staying for over a month and departing without paying his bill. A brother-in-law had passed half a dozen worthless checks on the hostelry, some old time friends had borrowed several hundred dollars from him. His manager had worked in a special friend as buyer for the hotel, and Ted could not help but notice the extortionate prices paid for supplies.

"Something's wrong," decided Ted. "I must find somebody to watch the outlay while I sit around playing gentleman."

Ted was thus occupied in his favorite arm chair one evening when a little girl of about ten came hurriedly into the lobby. He could not help but notice her deep agitation. She looked wearied and her attire was poor and old.

"Please, sir," she panted, "mamma is sick."

"Eh, hello! what's that?" exclaimed Ted. "Who is your mamma and where is she?"

"Mamma is tired out and walked a long way, and she expected to find friends here, and they're all dead and gone, and we're hungry, too. She's just outside."

Big hearted Ted Morse stirred himself with a vigor ever present when he could do anybody a good turn. He followed the child outside. There seated on the step of the ladies' entrance was a young woman, pale, with closed eyes, and apparently overcome with weakness. She looked dazed and despairing as Ted touched her arm and spoke kindly. In fragments she weakly told her story. Both her husband and herself had in years agone been respectively steward and bookkeeper of the hotel for John Morse. They had left for another position six years previous. Her husband had died leaving her penniless. She had come to Brompton to see if her former employer could not give her employment again.

"So the finely kept books showing a profit where my careless figuring had a loss was your work, eh?" observed Ted, when he had seen mother and child installed comfortably. "You've come at the right time, Mrs. Alward. If ever I needed experienced advice it's just now."

Within a month Mrs. Alward was back at her old desk and the leaks in profits began to diminish. Within a month Ted experienced his first love and there was a quiet wedding.

Genial host and genial husband to a charming, helpful woman, a kindly father quite to little Eva, it seemed as though fate had led to his door the influences that were to make him a success and a happy man.

Clothing Allowance.

When making out a budget, approximately one-sixth to one-fourth of the family income should be apportioned for clothing. Seventy per cent of the clothing allowance will be needed for outer clothing such as coats, suits, dresses, shoes, etc., and 20 per cent might be allowed for accessories and 5 per cent for cleaning and repairs.

QUESTIONS 100 GIRLS

Miss Elizabeth Cleveland Finds That Very Few Girls Thinks of Homemaking as Life Vocation.

Detroit, Mich., May 19.—Efforts to find out whether preparation for home making or a job was uppermost in the minds of a hundred girls of fifteen who are employed but receive four hours instruction a week in a local school resulted in some interesting data.

Inasmuch as many of the girls are of foreign birth and not accustomed to the idea of freedom of choice, great stress was first laid upon the fact that in America every girl can choose what she wishes most to do. The girls were asked to turn in a thoughtful answer to the following question:

"If you could have the kind of life you wish, with unlimited means at your disposal, what life would you choose for yourself?"

Of the 100 answers, twenty-four spoke in favor of a vocation, twenty were in favor of home-making, twenty-eight laid equal stress on home-making and a vocation, fourteen stressed the joy of life and good clothes, seven advocated being of service to others, three expressed a desire for a higher education, three placed character above all attainment, and one only longed for fame. Of the twenty-four mentioned, vocations however, four did not specify any particular vocation, only four cared for the vocation itself more than as a means for the securing of good clothes, and only two were in any way in line for the vocations they mentioned. Of the 100 forty-three, in one way or other, mentioned happiness as the thing most desired in life.

While many of the answers showed a great lack of imagination, many were laughable, and not a few were pathetic. Among the answers were the following:

"I wish I could have a new suit by this time next week."Cash Girl.

"My greatest wish is to be an experienced stenographer, and have a boy friend."Cash Girl.

"I would like to have brains with which to do my work so that I will not be an utter failure. I would like to be a woman to whom her husband and children could come for comfort. —Cash Girl.

"I want it to be full of life and have lots of friends and enjoy out-of-door sports, and when I go to such places I would like to have nice clothes." —Home Girl.

"I wish that I could have a nice home that we did not have to rent; one that we could live in by ourselves and have a landlord in under us."—Telephone Operator.

"I wish, if only my wish could come true! I would like a nice, educated husband, with ample funds and nice, pretty children with, also, a pretty home and flowers everywhere."—Factory Girl.

"I wish I could go out West to some little town where I could be a cowgirl, and some trouble would arise and I could stop it, and then I would be pointed out by the people."—Cash Girl.

The conclusion of Miss Elizabeth Cleveland, head of the vocational work is that so far neither the home nor the job seems of paramount importance in the fifteen-year-old girls' minds. They need education and higher standards of opportunity and training, which will take their minds away from material things and give them better ideals of service. The vocational department does not in any sense intend to teach girls what they think they like, but does aim to keep in closest sympathy with them, so that higher standards can be inculcated.
